SECTION A: COMPREHENSION

QUESTION 1

Read the article below and answer the questions that follow.

Your Digital Footprint Is Your New CV

1 Ten years ago, an employer who wanted to know more about a job applicant would phone a few references. Today, many employers simply type the applicant's name into a search engine or look at his or her social media profiles. What they find there – your digital footprint – can open doors or close them before you are even invited for an interview.

2 A digital footprint is the trail of information you leave behind every time you use the Internet: the photos you post, the comments you write, the groups you join and even the posts you "like". Unlike words spoken in a taxi, these traces do not disappear. A screenshot can be taken in a second, and a post that you deleted years ago may still be stored somewhere on a server.

3 Recruitment agencies say that the most common reasons for rejecting candidates after an online check are offensive language, insults aimed at former employers, photos showing irresponsible behaviour and false information about qualifications. "If a candidate says on Facebook that she hates Mondays and her boss, I wonder how she will speak about my company," explains Thandeka Ndlovu, an HR manager at a logistics firm in Durban.

4 However, a digital footprint is not only a danger; it can also be a powerful tool. A professional profile on a networking site, a short video showing a project you built at college, or a blog in which you explain how you solved a technical problem can all show an employer your skills, your attitude and your ability to communicate. Many young people have been offered jobs because a manager saw their work online.

5 So how do you clean up your footprint? Experts suggest a simple three-step approach. First, search for your own name and see what appears. Second, delete or hide anything that you would not want a future employer – or your grandmother – to see, and tighten your privacy settings. Third, start building a positive presence by sharing your achievements and commenting thoughtfully on topics related to your field.

6 Thandeka puts it simply: "Before you post, ask yourself whether you would be proud to see it on a billboard with your name under it. If the answer is no, don't post it."

1.1	According to paragraph 1, how did employers check applicants ten years ago?	(1)
1.2	Define a "digital footprint" in your own words.	(2)
1.3	Name THREE things that form part of a person's digital footprint.	(3)
1.4	The writer compares online posts with "words spoken in a taxi" (paragraph 2). Explain the point of this comparison.	(2)
1.5	Why is deleting a post not always enough to remove it? Give TWO reasons.	(2)
1.6	List FOUR reasons why candidates are rejected after an online check.	(4)
1.7	Explain why Thandeka Ndlovu is worried about the candidate who hates Mondays and her boss.	(2)
1.8	The word "However" begins paragraph 4. What change in the writer's argument does it introduce?	(2)
1.9	Give TWO examples of how a digital footprint can help a person get a job.	(2)
1.10	Why does the writer mention "your grandmother" in paragraph 5? What is the tone of this phrase?	(2)
1.11	Summarise the three-step approach to cleaning up a digital footprint.	(3)
1.12	Explain the billboard test that Thandeka suggests (paragraph 6).	(2)
1.13	Do you think it is fair for employers to judge applicants by their social media? Justify your answer.	(3)

SECTION B: SUMMARY

QUESTION 2

Read the text below. Summarise, in point form, SEVEN ways in which a student can save money while studying at a TVET college.

1. Write SEVEN points in full sentences, numbered 1 to 7.
2. Use your OWN words as far as possible.
3. Your summary must not be longer than 80 words. Write the number of words at the end.

Stretching Every Rand

Many students run out of money long before the end of the month, but a few simple habits can make a big difference. Start by drawing up a monthly budget so that you know exactly how much comes in and goes out. Cooking your own meals in bulk is far cheaper than buying takeaways every day. Instead of buying new textbooks, look for second-hand copies or borrow them from the library. Where possible, walk or share lifts with classmates to cut transport costs. Always ask whether a student discount is available, because many shops and cellphone networks offer one. Avoid buying clothes or gadgets on credit, as the interest makes everything far more expensive. Finally, try to put away even a small amount each month in a savings account for emergencies.
