QUESTION 2

TEN FACTS:

- Technology is a tool for effective teaching and learning but a teacher is needed to present this tool.
- Just as books aided learning but did not replace the teacher, in the same way technology only enhances teaching but cannot replace the teacher.
- Teachers tailor their lessons to meet their learners' needs and provide feedback to learners to enhance learning.
- If technology is used without the teacher, we will never understand why children fail to grasp the lesson content.
- Teachers appreciate and accept learners' diversity. Hence they can adapt teaching to cater for this diversity.
- While tests can be marked on a computer, the computer cannot give feedback to learners on areas of weakness.
- Technology can malfunction but teachers will always be there to mark and give constructive feedback to learners.
- Humans need human interaction.
- Children need positive feedback and encouragement from adults.
- This ensures that the child is adequately motivated.
- Teachers also teach basic human interaction skills to their learners such as respect, communication, etc.
- Computers are not passionate about work; teachers are.
- Computers are tools to make life easier but they can never themselves become teachers.
