QUESTION 2

Mulalo Masisi, a cofounder and chief executive officer of PEN-IT Solutions, was born in Thohoyandou in Limpopo in 1987.

Mulalo is a professional information technology specialist, a computing forensic expert, an entrepreneur and a leader who possesses a wisdom that belies his age.

He obtained his BSc Information Technology at the University of the Free State and BSc Honours in Computer Science at the University of Venda and holds certificates in photography, human resources management and project management. He is currently busy with a Masters in Business Administration (MBA).

His vision transforms marketing into a fantasy world of digital media with profitable and long-lasting relationships. His current corporate position is chief website officer at the University of Venda (UNIVEN) in the department of communication and marketing. He started his career as an IT specialist at Kalahari Productions & Booksellers and was later promoted to senior director responsibilities.

Due to his eagerness to succeed and learn more, he then cofounded PEN-IT Solutions which is a successful award-winning digital media agency. He is also a director of various other companies with interests in investments, imports and exports, petroleum, mining, business development as well as career development.

Whilst chairing PEN-IT Solutions his major accomplishments amongst others included corporate governance, website developments, human resource management, disaster recovery and installing printing and office equipment of millions of rands, as well as introducing two new branches and a virtual office.

He holds a mandate to restructure the UNIVEN brand and communicate it effectively to its stakeholders, employees, management and students through various platforms.

He is currently working on a new content management system for the university and on brand awareness campaigns.

QUESTION 4

AMAKOSI CHRISTIAN CENTRE

The Amakosi Christian Centre is a safe haven for many homeless people in Cape Town and provides care and services to help people heal spiritually, physically and emotionally. Their doors are open to anyone who thinks there is no hope in life.

The centre is an NGO and relies heavily on donations and sponsors from the broader community. They opened their doors with a small loan from ABSA bank and since then they have never looked back.

The centre also received funding from the Health SETA to give the student nurses an internship for 18 months, which is a very good training opportunity.

They employ 6 dedicated, hard-working and passionate volunteer nurses who take care of the patients. They have five ladies working in the kitchen, a professional doctor, a driver, a receptionist, a messenger and a gardener to see to the ground.

Another factor which makes the centre successful is the spiritual help that professional pastors provide to the community members.
