SECTION B

QUESTION 2

2.1 Method 1

- Obtain all details of group from operator in advance.
- Dispense completely with individual registration cards.
- Advantages: This method is quick and cuts down on paperwork.
- Disadvantages: Lack of confirmation that information provided by the operator is correct.
- It lacks the signature of individual members.
- Could cause problems in the verification of charges signed to guest rooms.

Method 2

- Provide the tour leader with registration cards for each guest.
- These are completed en route to the hotel.
- Operator and guests arrive, and the cards are handed to the receptionist in exchange for the room keys.
- Advantage: Reception has signature of individual members.
- Information provided is correct.

Method 3

- Register guests in the normal way as they arrive at the hotel.
- Disadvantage: Causes congestion at the reception desk.

(3 × 2 for three methods plus 6 × 1 for any suitable advantages and disadvantages = 12 × 1) (12)

2.2 Letter

- A letter requesting accommodation amounts to an offer to contract.
- The hotel's written acknowledgement serves as acceptance.

Telephone

- The booking contract is concluded by telephone conversation between the guest and the hotel.
- Only where the words are sufficient to amount to an offer by one party to the other to contract, and an acceptance by that other party of the offer, will a contract be brought about.
- It is normal practice for hotels to require confirmation in writing from a client.

Chance/face to face

- A person may call at reception seeking a room.
- Traveller's request and receptionist's offer is pre-contractual.
- Receptionist telling traveller that room is available at a certain price and for a certain period is making an offer.
- Traveller accepting the offer brings contract into being.

Telex and fax

- The law considers a fax as an instant form of communication.

Copyright reserved

- Same principles apply as to bookings made on a face-to-face basis.
- There are fewer misunderstandings regarding reservation requests. The hotel can fax confirmation of the booking, even for international bookings between countries in different time zones (12 × 1) (12)

2.3
- Time of year
- Time of week
- Length of stay
- How many rooms
- What other facilities the group will use
- Who they are
- Amount of business guaranteed by agents in both high and low season

(Any 6 × 1) (6)

- The cashier ensures that all valuables in the safe or safety deposit box are collected by the guest.
- Ensures that a signed receipt is obtained.
- Ensures that any outstanding payments are made. (Any 2 × 1) (2)

4.2

- The hotelkeeper has the right to retain a guest's luggage or property until the bill has been paid.
- This right should be exercised with caution.
- Mere suspicion that the guest will not pay his/her bill is not enough.
- If the guest is about to leave and he/she does not comply with the hotelkeeper's demands, the hotelkeeper may prevent the removal of the guest's possessions from the premises and retain the property until payment has been received.
- The hotelkeeper is not entitled to take the clothes off the back of a guest.
- He/she does not have the right to detain the guest himself/herself.
- Lien extends only to property that is on the premises.
- If luggage has already been placed in a car, it cannot be retained.
- Lien extends to all property brought onto the hotel premises. A car on hire purchase is not subject to the lien.
- If the hotelkeeper is advised that a certain article does not belong to the guest, the lien would not extend to this article.
- The hotelkeeper may retain only sufficient property to satisfy the debt.
- Property held under a lien cannot be sold until judgement has been obtained and writ of execution has been issued in the proper manner.

(Any 7 × 2) (14)
