QUESTION 4

4.1
- Answer the telephone promptly
- Identify yourself and the company
- Remember the caller's name and use it in the conversation
- Cultivate a voice that sounds warm, friendly and professional
- Use formal expressions such as 'good morning instead of 'hello'
- Speak clearly, with a variation in tone
- Stay professional, don't use words like 'sweetie' or 'my darling'
- Record messages correctly with the appropriate information
- If a call is cut off, call the caller back
- End the conversation on a friendly, positive note
- When you have said goodbye, wait for the caller to hang up first.

(Any 5 × 1) (5)

4.2
- Keep quiet (cannot talk and listen at the same time)
- Try to concentrate on what people are saying
- Listen properly when people speak; don't interrupt them or finish sentences for them
- Take notes to remember what they are saying
- Be patient when listening to someone
- Don't assume that you know what people want; try to work out what the customer expects
- Reassure the speaker that you are listening by smiling, nodding, making eye contact
- Watch the facial expressions and body movements of the person you are talking to.

(Any 5 × 1) (5)

4.3

- Show sympathy
- Assure customers that you understand them
- Stay calm and polite – complaining clients are valuable to the business
- Listen to the clients' complaint and don't take their anger personally
- Know the policies on refunds, returns and complaints
- Resolve the problem immediately if you can.
- If you are unable to help, refer the client to someone who can help, like the supervisor

(Any 5 × 2) (10)

4.4 PHASE 1 The introductory phase✓
The product is new, and advertisements need to be bold and very different from competitor products.✓

PHASE 2: The growth phase✓
The product is popular, and customers are buying it for the second or third time. More advertisements lead to more customers and increased market share. Competitors took notice of the product. ✓

PHASE 3: The maturity phase✓
The marketplace has become saturated. The product's subtler features or new uses of the product are being advertised. Packaging may change to still attract consumers. ✓

PHASE 4: The decline phase✓
The product reached a decline stage due to changes in lifestyles, tastes or technology. No more advertising and promotion takes place and product dies out. ✓ (4 × 2) (8)
