A DIGITAL ERA – THE SOUTH AFRICAN STATISTICS

Smartphones, tablets and desktops are everywhere and the role of traditional media and content sharing has rapidly changed in the age of the internet-driven 24-hour news and social media sharing.

A global trend, South Africa is on track and seeing rapid changes in how readers consume information. The days of mass-market print publications are declining and we are looking at a new era from print to digital and beyond.

According to We Are Social's 2017 Digital Report, average South Africans spend a significantly longer portion of their day engaging with digital media than with any other medium.

Nearly everyone is online. As consumers, we can take news anywhere in the world with us and we are connected to and by technology throughout the day. Digital media also allows companies to reach the right audience at their convenience and create lasting experiences with customers. Having a finger on the digital versus print pulse allows a company to transform itself in step with consumers' changing habits.
