SECTION A: SOURCE-BASED QUESTIONS

QUESTION 1: WHAT CAUSED THE FRENCH REVOLUTION OF 1789?

An extract written for this paper, based on history textbooks.

By 1789 the French government was nearly bankrupt. It had spent huge sums on wars, including helping the Americans fight Britain, and the royal court at Versailles lived in luxury. King Louis XVI needed more taxes, but the clergy and the nobles paid almost nothing. Ordinary people, the Third Estate, carried the burden of taxes. A poor harvest in 1788 made bread so expensive that many families spent most of their income on it.

At the same time, the ideas of the Enlightenment were spreading. Writers argued that people were born with rights and that a ruler's power should come from the people, not from God. In May 1789 the king called a meeting of the Estates-General. When the Third Estate was outvoted, its members broke away and declared themselves the National Assembly. On 14 July 1789, crowds in Paris stormed the Bastille, a royal prison and fortress.

QUESTION 2: HOW DID MOSHOESHOE BUILD THE BASOTHO NATION?

An extract written for this paper, based on history textbooks.

In the early 1800s, southern Africa was shaken by years of wars, raids and famine, known as the Mfecane or Difaqane. Many communities were scattered and people lost their cattle and homes. In 1824 Moshoeshoe, a young Basotho leader, moved his followers to Thaba Bosiu, a flat-topped mountain with steep cliffs, fresh water and grazing on top. Attackers could only climb it along a few narrow paths.

Moshoeshoe welcomed refugees from many groups, gave them land and protected them. He lent cattle to poor families through the mafisa system: the borrower could use the milk and keep some calves, and in return became loyal to Moshoeshoe. He often chose talks and gifts instead of war, even sending cattle to enemies who had attacked him. In 1833 he invited French missionaries to live among his people, hoping they would advise him and bring education. When Boer settlers from the Orange Free State took more and more of his land, Moshoeshoe asked Britain for protection. In 1868 his land became the British territory of Basutoland, which later became the independent country of Lesotho.
