QUESTION 2

Read the two extracts below and answer the questions.

LET'S LOSE THE WEIGHT AND KEEP OUR JOBS*

How? Do not tax sugar-sweetened beverages.

Obesity is an undeniable problem in South Africa, but so is unemployment. The proposed soft-drink tax will cost the country thousands of jobs. Our solution includes reduced pack sizes and zero-/low-kJ options which are four times more effective than tax and 100% harmless to the people we employ.

*Is the tax worth it? You decide.

WHOSE SIDE ARE YOU ON?

Supporting the sugary drinks industry puts our children at risk of diabetes and stroke.

Supporting our children's future means parliament supporting a strong tax on sugary drinks.

HOW TO BE A GOOD LEADER AND NOT AN AWFUL BOSS

Being promoted into a management position is not enough to make you a good leader – it requires hard work to get there.

Babita Mathur-Helm, a senior lecturer in organisational transformation and development at the University of Stellenbosch Business School, has the following advice:

- Being the manager is not about doing everything on your own.
- Understand the dynamics of your organisation and build relationships to help you do your job better.
- Allow each team member to contribute according to their skills and using their initiative.
- Encourage empathy and support in your team, and take a genuine interest in other people's lives.

QUESTION 7

Read the extract below and answer the questions.

NUMSA GEARING FOR 'MOTHER OF ALL BATTLES'

The National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa (Numsa) has urged its members to prepare for industrial action it has termed the 'mother of all battles' in the plastics and engineering sectors.

Negotiations are currently underway between Numsa, which represents around 120 000 workers in the engineering sector, and more than 10 000 employers in the Metal and Engineering Industries Bargaining Council (MEIBC) which covers more than 350 000 employees. Numsa is demanding a 15% wage increase in the sector, while employers have offered an increase of 5,3%.

In correspondence Business Day says it has seen that Numsa general secretary, Irvin Jim, has encouraged regional secretaries to embark on a 'fighting campaign involving every factory to defend collective bargaining and improve workers' wages'. At the same time, the Commission for Conciliation, Mediation and Arbitration (CCMA) has warned of 'dysfunctionalities' in the country's collective bargaining system.

Shimane Kgantse, acting senior commissioner for mediation and collective bargaining, last week told a mining forum that the system was characterised by protracted wage negotiations and industrial action involving intimidation and violence that challenged negotiated outcomes. 'For the past 15 to 16 years, we are still negotiating in the same manner, nothing has changed, it means that we are not learning anything,' Kgantse said.

The National Employers Association of South Africa pointed out a pattern that has emerged over the last few years, which shows strike action utilised as a mode of negotiation rather than a last resort by labour unions. Kgantse warned that utilising this method impacts negatively on the economy and could limit the potential for sustained growth.

A month-long strike in the metals and engineering sector by Numsa in 2014, which only ended after the union settled on a 10% wage offer, resulted in the economy losing millions.
