1.3 Advantages

- Differentiation allows a business to compete in an area that is not price. Consumers view it as different and unique and therefore desirable.
- It can make consumers loyal to your brand and they will be reluctant to change to another brand.
- Consumers see your product as having a value that they cannot get from any of your competitor's products.
- You can charge a higher price for you product. (2 × 2) (4)

Disadvantages

- It can be an expensive strategy, because the business needs to keep changing its products as consumers' tastes change.
- It is difficult to enter an industry in which businesses compete using differentiation.
- If the product you produce is desirable, other businesses may produce counterfeit or imitation versions. (2 × 2) (4)
