The Elephants of Addo

1 Addo Elephant National Park is near Gqeberha in the Eastern Cape. Today it is home to more than 600 elephants.

2 Things were very different long ago. In 1931 only eleven elephants were left in the area. Farmers had hunted many of them because the elephants ate their crops and broke their fences. The park was opened to protect the last few elephants.

3 An adult elephant can eat about 150 kg of plants and drink up to 200 litres of water in one day. Elephants use their long trunks to breathe, smell, drink and pick up food. Their big ears flap like fans to keep them cool.

4 Elephants live in family groups called herds. The oldest female, called the matriarch, leads the herd. She remembers where to find water and food, even in a drought.

5 Visitors to Addo must stay inside their cars. Elephants look gentle, but they are very strong and can be dangerous if they are scared or angry. Drivers must also watch out for small dung beetles on the roads. These beetles roll balls of elephant dung, and they have right of way!

6 Thanks to the park, the elephants of Addo are safe today. Their story shows that when people work together, we can save animals that are in danger.
