7.3 A tourist is a visitor who is travelling to a place other than that of his/her usual environment.✓ The trip should consist of at least one overnight stay in collective or private accommodation✓and not be longer than one year.✓

(3 × 1) (3)

7.4.1 ADVANTAGES
- Improvement in manufactured and natural environments: The money from tourism allows for the improvement of the natural and man-made environment – therefore allows for employment directly and indirectly
- Increased numbers in plant and animal life: The introduction of conservation areas and policies
- Contributions from non-profit sectors: Different organisations contribute to the positive enhancement of the environment
- Improvements in the tourism landscape: Most environmental modifications are done by professional designs, e.g. the expertise of a wide range of specialists, e.g. marketers and ecologists who will adhere to developments that are in harmony with the environment

(ONE mark for the impact and 1 mark for the discussion)

(Any 3 × 2) (6)

7.4.2 DISADVANTAGES

- Various forms of pollution: An increase of people can lead to increase of air, noise, water pollution
- Soil erosion: Paths that tourists walk on are exposed to wind and rain and may erode away over a period of time
- Signposting: Directional signs or promotional materials must be used and these signs must blend in with the natural environment
- Vandalism: Names and graffiti written by tourists visiting the site can harm the site – look untidy – carved on tree trunks, spray painting on rocks, removal of plants, etc.
- Tourist facilities and the environment: The need for toilet and parking areas becomes apparent when visitor numbers increase. This brings in indirect contractors to develop, however, if not done in conjunction with environmental friendly policy it can be disastrous.
- Wear and tear to buildings/sites: Mass tourism is responsible for wear and tear to sites and buildings – durable walkways, modern lighting, lookout points and information areas are created – thereby destroying the natural environment
